MOUNTAIN TRIPS

¶ There are many beautiful mountain trips to be taken from the Plumas House as a center. One of the most attractive of these is the one to Crystal Lake at the summit of Mount Hough, twelve miles north of Quincy. This lake is at an elevation of 7000 feet, and is a natural curiosity. From the summit of Mount Hough, all parts of Plumas and portions of Sierra, Lassen, Tehama and Butte counties may be seen on a clear day.

¶ Another beautiful trip is to Silver and Gold lakes, about the same distance west of Quincy, at the base of Spanish peak, the road winding thru Spanish Creek canyon, Meadow Valley and up the rugged mountain side thru scenery more beautiful than pen can describe. ¶ From Quincy, many tourists go to Lake Almanor, the greatest trout fishing ground in the State. Another beautiful drive is from Quincy to Nelson Point, an old mining settlement on the Middle Fork of the Feather river, thirteen miles distant. The road is in excellent condition for automobiles, and is through a cool, shady canyon. ¶ There are many beautiful walks over footpaths to points adjacent to the town. These canyons are beautiful to behold, with their wealth of wild flowers and mosses.

QUINCY "THE GEM OF THE SIERRAS"

¶ Quincy has been termed the "Gem of the Sierras," because of its beautiful setting in a valley whose vegetation is green the year 'round; surrounded by lofty spruce and pine-covered mountains on every side and with a background of ridges, slopes and canyons which make it one of the beauty spots of the Sierras. Its streets are neat and clean, and the appearance of its residences and business houses bespeak a prosperous community. It has up to date grocery and dry goods stores, millinery, drug and shoe stores; a commercial and savings bank, public schools, church, county high school, moving picture theater, skating rink, etc.

¶ Quincy Western Railway trains connect with the Western Pacific at Quincy Junction five miles distant. ¶ The town is supplied with pure water from living springs, uncontaminated by proximity to human habitations. The air is cool and invigorating. The altitude of Quincy is 3400 feet above sea level. Its population is approximately 800 people.

¶ It is well worth the time and money required to visit Quincy in order to enjoy the pleasures of a ride through the Feather River Canyon on the Western Pacific railroad. Ninety-six miles of the main line of this road is in Plumas county, passing near Quincy.

FISHING and HUNTING

¶ Trout fishing has long since made Plumas county deservedly popular with the angler. The streams abound with rainbow, Loch Leven, Eastern brook, cut-throat and native trout. There are hundreds of miles of trout streams in the county, and scores of lakes well stocked with fish. Quincy is the center from which five roads radiate to every part of the county, and all of the fishing grounds are within a half day's drive from the Plumas House.

¶ The hunting is likewise excellent during the open season. Deer, quail, duck and grouse are to be found in their habitats, and bear and California lions (pumas) are quite numerous in the more secluded mountain sections. As the county has an area of 2567 square miles of mountain, canyon and valley lands, and as it is the source of the North and Middle Forks of the Feather river and of a branch of the Yuba river, it will be seen that it is ideally suited for a sportsmen's paradise.

¶ Plumas county, and especially the country adjacent to Quincy, is an old placer mining section, its abandoned mining camps and gold diggings adding a touch of romance from the days of forty-nine. Its principal products at the present time are lumber, copper, gold, livestock, dairy products, grain and the hardier vegetables and fruits.
